

Chicago, IL – March, 2007

Prospect City announced it has added VoIP telephone services to its portfolio. This new component will join Prospect City's other technical offerings, including Velvet Search Management Database technology, Website Design and Hosting, Email, The Private Research Exchange Hub and Private Instant Messaging.

"For our clients, VoIP telephone services make sense. The phone is the most critical tool of executive search and we aim to provide a low-cost, high-quality solution to boutiques, large firms and everyone in-between" said Robert Stein, President of Prospect City. "Our VoIP Systems are really an extension of all of our infrastructure products and services. Now our database product communicates directly with the user's phone to dial and lookup records automatically. Even our IM systems are impacted as they automatically display the call status of employees in their instant messaging window. For boutiques it opens new possibilities for integrating temporary or full-time help regardless of their location around the globe, and from a caller's perspective they'll all feel as if they're in one office."

Prospect City's VoIP systems are fully customizable and available beginning March 15, 2007.
