Prospect City announced it has been retained by a $300M manufacturer of wound care products, to perform a series of reference checks on a finalist candidate. This is Prospect City's 22nd new reference-check client.

"Clients come to us to perform reference checks because we offer a unique third-party perspective without any investment in the outcome. In addition, we provide a somewhat unique deliverable because we perform recruitment research to identify a number of reference targets outside of those offered by the candidates." said Robert Stein, President of Prospect City. "These projects are relatively inexpensive because they are based on time, yet they are performed by experienced senior level executive recruiters."

To support the service, Prospect City delivers a unique report unlike those of traditional recruiters. "These reports involve deep research on former employers and those related executives." added Stein. "We look for patterns and often deliver topics which the client could explore further before making a final offer. We provide clients with critical information prior to finalizing a deal, and we've become increasingly popular among private equity firms, too."

Prospect City recently completed a reference project for the CEO of an $88B global company on behalf of one of the world's leading private equity firms.

Prospect City is an infrastructure services provider to executive recruiting firms and corporate recruiting functions within large organizations. The company provides unmatched recruiting research and innovative technology to corporate clients and executive recruitment firms.
